Fire restrictions lifted on state lands effective September 15, 2011

Beginning on Thursday, September 15th, all remaining fire restrictions imposed by the State Forester on state-owned lands in Arizona will be lifted due to lessening fire danger.

Restrictions across much of the state were lifted several weeks ago, however fire danger remained high in western Arizona.

Fire restrictions end Thursday in Yuma, La Paz, Mohave and Coconino Counties and state-owned lands north of the Colorado River (Arizona Strip).

The order lifting restrictions applies to all State Trust Lands, Game and Fish Wildlife Areas and State Parks outside incorporated municipalities as well as all Department of Transportation highway right-of-way property outside incorporated municipalities not owned by federal land management agencies.

Fireworks remain prohibited on state-owned lands unless authorized by individual state agencies.
